1. Brief self-evaluation.
Were you successful in recreating the photo? Why or why not?

1. Were you successful in recreating photo? Why or why not?
I think I was successful in recreating my photo because I feel that the photos look pretty similar. However, I could not accomplish the same texture as the one in the original since in my photo the mushrooms look more smooth and with a shine while in the original they don't look as shiny and you can clearly see the texture. Another thing I didn't accomplish was to make them get the same color as the original, even when I tried to turn it into white and black I could not get the right color. Other than that I feel really good about my photo and I feel like that is one of the best photos I've ever taken.

2. Describe the actions you took to shoot your photo.
Before I decided to take this photo I went to three other options that did not result because of the specific shadows that they had. Once I saw this photo I knew that I wanted to try to recreate it. I went to the store and I tried to pick the best mushrooms and the most similar to the original that I could find. After I had them I placed them as accurate as in the original over a dark surface and then I began to shoot my photo. I had to try many different types of lighting and I had to adjust many settings in my camera until I got the photo that I wanted. Once I had the best photo I edited it to get it to look how I wanted it. I tried to get it to look white and gray like in the original but it was very hard and so I did the best that I could to make it look as accurate as possible.

3. Name the photographer and the photo title (if any).
